PIRE Release: Rap Listeners Prone to Alcohol, Drugs and Violence

Dr. Meng-Jinn Chen, a Research Scientist at the Prevention Resource Center (within PIRE), produced a report based on an NIAAA-funded study of relationships between rap music and alcohol, drugs, and violence. The study, titled "Music, Substance Use and Aggression," queried 1,000 community college students and produced results that indicated rap music is often associated with alcohol use/abuse, drug use, and aggressive behavior. Visit www.udetc.org/documents/Rap_music_report.pdf for more details of the study.

"Pregaming": A New Focus to Reduce Underage Drinking at Colleges

The Boston Globe reported that some colleges are using a new strategy for keeping students from drinking dangerously. The main concern is that students are binge drinking before going to bars and clubs where they cannot drink legally. School officials are providing "pregame" (or preparty) incentives to students to occupy their time before they go to bars. Visit: www.boston.com/news/local/massachusetts/articles/2006/04/09/colleges_target_preparty_drinking?mode=PF for more information on this effort.

Report Indicates Good News (and Some Not-So-Good News)

The Associated Press issued information that drug use among teens has decreased nationwide, but underage drinking remains a concern. Specific State information provided in the report showed that, in California and Wisconsin, underage drinking rates actually increased. The report came from SAMHSA and was based on interviews from 135,000 individuals. For more information, go to: www.msnbc.com/id/12189974/. Strategies for High Risk Events - Prom & Graduation:

Proms and graduations should be marked as joyous occasions for youth, parents and other adult allies. These events are highlights of young lives and often produce memories that last for a lifetime. However, there are risks that are involved when prom and graduation, youth and alcohol are mixed- whether it be the prom after-party that leads to a deadly car crash or "first week" at the beach where an alcohol-induced party creates an at-risk environment where youth, strategies can be implemented in an effort to make these events safer. Just knowing the risks that, unfortunately, do come with proms and graduations can help communities plan effectively for safer celebrations. We encourage adults and youth to participate in this National Electronic Seminar. If you know of a parent who will be sending their child to a prom or graduation, please invite them to as well!

Engaging Resident Assistants (RAs) in Reducing Underage Drinking:

Colleges and universities play a vital role in affecting the social norms and attitudes about alcohol use within campus environments. Most campuses are challenged with a large portion of their student body being comprised of youth under the legal drinking age of 21 and easy access to alcohol. Join us in learning how residential life systems can engage and empower their residential life staff in fostering a healthier, safer, and legal campus environment.

Action Through the Eyes of Youth:

In the prevention of underage drinking, in order to be effective, we must include the voices of Youth and understand the problem through their eyes. There are a number of youth groups and coalitions working towards changing the environment that invites and sustains underage drinking. There are many examples of successful youth taking the lead and making positive changes in the social, legal and economic environments where young people make decisions about alcohol. In this audio-call you will hear from YOUTH who will share their accomplishments and challenges with these efforts. Through this audio call the audience will understand that in working through a solution to prevent underage drinking we must recognize the Action through the eyes of youth!

October 19, 2006 3:00 – 4:15 p.m. Eastern Time
Keeping the Holidays Safe and Merry:

The holidays are a time of family and community celebrations. Alcohol often becomes a central figure within these celebrations, which, unfortunately, can have life altering consequences. Communities have come to view alcohol combined with the holidays as a norm. Other unfortunate events occur during this time of year that forever scars the memories of what are supposed to be times of celebration. Traffic crashes increase during this time of year. Youth are exposed to alcohol in their homes and in other settings, furthering the mixed messages that drinking is accepted on all fronts. During this National Electronic Seminar, speakers will provide information on the use and abuse of alcohol during the holidays, plus interventions and practices for making the holidays safer for all.

Enforcement and Community collaboration results in a successful ordinance in Highland Park, Texas

Highland Park, Texas, a city within the city of Dallas, has enacted an ordinance that prohibits any adult from allowing youth to drink or possess alcohol with their knowledge and on property owned or rented by the adult. This ordinance was passed and enacted on February 27, 2006, by the Highland Park Town Council.

In January of 1999, Highland Park made national news when a large party was held in a warehouse with over 250 youth present. Adults were aware of this party and many other "house parties" that were being held under the knowledge and consent of adults. The Town of Highland Park Department of Public Safety made numerous arrests (average 150 each year) of youth at these parties and the Chief, Darrell Fant, decided to organize and take action. He had heard about a similar ordinance from a Success Story on Yamhill County, Oregon. Chief Fant decided that a similar ordinance in Highland Park could work in Highland Park.

The Alliance on Underage Drinking (ALoud) was formed by Chief Fant, US Attorney for the Northern District of Texas, Paul Coggins, and Dallas Police Chief, Ben Click. ALoud involved law enforcement agencies, schools, prevention groups, and elected officials. ALoud facilitated a Town Hall meeting to address the issue of underage drinking and out of this grew support for a Social Host ordinance that addressed adults providing a place for youth to gather to drink alcohol.

The ordinance itself was drafted, using as an example, a similar ordinance from Yamhill County, Oregon. Councilperson Helen Mann attended local court hearings of the youth charged during the house parties and was shocked at the reaction or lack of reaction that many parents had to their child's involvement in breaking the law. Councilperson Mann provided the necessary push to get the ordinance moved through the adoption process by the Town Council. Other groups that were involved in the passage of this ordinance are MADD, Chemical Awareness Resource Education (CARE), and the Greater Dallas Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse).

Thus far, the Town of Highland Park has received this new ordinance with open arms and little to no resistance. Chief Fant stated, "Over the years, there's been a shift. About 95% of parents support proactive enforcement now." Chief Fant hopes that the ordinance provides opportunities for families to begin a dialogue of the dangers of underage drinking and that parents will "just be parents" and choose to be involved with their children.

Chief Fant hopes that neighboring areas within Northern Texas will model this ordinance and develop their own. Due to extensive media coverage in all of the Dallas area newspapers and television media, many surrounding communities near Highland Park requested a copy of the ordinance.

Now, the Town of Highland Park, Texas, has another tool for law enforcement to utilize that effectively addresses a component of underage drinking—adult provision of alcohol.
